Bureau of Prisons Criminal Alien Requirement 6 Talking Points, January 17, 2007 (Draft)	11	11	(b)(5)	(b)(5) was applied to the Draft Talking Points because the document represents predecisional determinations by the staff of the BOP. Draft documents are predecisional and ultimately are recommendations until the final document is approved. By exposing drafts to the Plaintiff or any potential entity desiring to contract with the BOP, it will reveal the process by which the BOP analyzes contract decisions and those with such information may gain a competitive advantage over contractors without this information. Further, revealing draft documents and the communications by staff appertaining thereto will (1) discourage the open and frank discussions on matters of policy between subordinates and superiors; (2) disclose premature proposed policies before they are finally adopted; and (3) may result in public confusion due to the disclosure of reasons and rationales that were not in fact ultimately the grounds for an agency's action, the disclosure of which would result in harm to the contracting process and operate as a potential competitive disadvantage to those that do not possess this information.
